Greetings!

I would like to introduce myself as the Mountain Home AFB School Liaison representative. My main focus is to inform and connect military families and Mountain Home AFB leadership with schools in Mountain Home and surrounding Treasure Valley communities. Additionally, my office will serve as an installation point of contact for school-related matters

Approximately 1.5 million children and youth attending U.S. Public schools have a parent serving in the military. The mobile lifestyle of a military family creates tough challenges for children who may attend as many as 13 schools in 12 years. This, added to the anxiety of parental separation during deployments creates the challenge of easing transitions for our children and youth.

I am available as a resource for military families, installation leadership, and school district staff and faculty. If you have questions or would like help accessing information, please contact me at the Airman & Family Readiness Center. Thank you.

Mike Jewell
School Liaison

There's more to Idaho than "Famous Potatoes"

Many people don't know much about Idaho except "famous potatoes." Since you live here now, you would probably like to know more. Adjacent to Washington and Oregon in the Pacific Northwest, Idaho is a big state. It's been said if you flatten all the mountains in Idaho, the state would be the size of Texas. Idaho covers two time zones, runs from IDAHO TRIVIA: Shoshone Falls, The Niagara of the West, spills over a 212-ft drop near Twin Falls.

Canada to Nevada, and encompasses the western side of the continental divide of the Rocky Mountains. Rivers, mountains and farmland dominate the state's landscape. The panhandle has emerald green hillsides, timbered mountains and pristine lakes. Central Idaho is covered with jagged peaks. The Snake River Plain, (where Mountain Home AFB is located) with its wide open vistas, irrigated farm lands and vibrant cities forms the character of Southern Idaho. Idaho's history lies with its native tribes, the Lewis and Clark Expedition and determined pioneers on the Oregon Trail. Today's Idaho is both cosmopolitan and small-town friendly. Boise, the capital and largest city, is approximately 45 miles from the base. It is located along the Oregon Trail has grown to a population of 190,000. Agriculture, manufacturing and tourism are Idaho's major industries. Abundant outdoor recreation opportunities and scenic vistas around every turn attract millions of tourists annually. Whichever part of this magnificent state you choose to discover, you'll find spectacular scenery, fun things to do and friendly, helpful people. You'll also find a place that's unhurried, unspoiled and unassuming. (www.visitidaho.org)

SCHOOL LIAISON DUTIES

INFORM ~ CONNECT ~ ASSIST

Based in the Airman & Family Readiness Center, the School Liaison (SLO) is available to act as a liaison for parents and students with the goal of helping schools and government agencies share best practices and policies.

Inform

The School Liaison can assist families learn with collecting accurate information about school districts, sports/academic organizations, post-secondary education options as well as help to resolve problem situations like where to register their child if they are living in temporary housing and provide accurate referrals so they can settle in to their new home and school in Mountain Home or Treasure Valley communities.

Connect

The School Liaison is also available to connect parents and students to the other resources, such as home school associations, virtual education options, and private schools. When families are “PCS’ing” the SLO can provide information about their gaining base so parents and students are prepared in advance to ease their transition.

Assist

The School Liaison is available to respond and assist with a wide range of issues concerning schools and the education of military children and youth. The SLO also attends monthly school board meetings to gather information and to identify and provide input on issues of concern to military families. This can be of great help to parents who may be making decisions without the support of a deployed spouse.

INBOUND STUDENTS

Tips for transitioning to a new school:

Mountain Home School District offers a comprehensive course of study for students in grades K - 12

- When registering a kindergarten or 1st grade student for school, please have your child's birth certificate and immunization records. State law requires that a child must be five years old to attend kindergarten or six years old to attend first grade on or before September 1 of the current school year.
- Please inform the school if your child was placed in any special program or if any special needs were identified at his/her previous school and provide records indicating this.
- Immunization records and birth certificate along with any school records are needed when registering a student in grades 2-12.
- Contact the housing office to determine the waiting period for on-base quarters. This may determine what school your child will attend. If you are in temporary housing, contact the School Liaison for assistance.
- If you have a child of high school age, gather information on Idaho's high school graduation requirements. The School Liaison can provide this information.
- Visit the web page for Mountain Home School District for current registration information, elementary enrollment zones, and school policies: www.mtnhomesd.org

<http://www.facebook.com/MilitaryFamiliesUnited> is a place for military kids young and old to discuss their experiences

No matter how many times a military family moves it's never easy. Here are several ideas below about how to make the best of being the new kid in school: (courtesy of Military Youth on the Move)

Do your research. Learn as much as you can about your new community before you get there. The more you know before you head to school for the first time, the better you'll feel.

Visit your school. As soon as you can, go see your new school. Even if it's summer vacation, go check out the building and get the basics down. If it isn't possible to visit your school before you go, try to get on the school's website and learn as much as you can that way.

Explore the area. Once you're all moved in, walk or drive around. Check out the local hang out spots, and introduce yourself to some other teens. Having even just one new friend can make that first day of school a lot easier.

Smile. Did you know that when you smile you have a better chance of making friends? This simple action can make you more approachable to the other kids.

Start fresh. Think of this move as a good thing. You get a chance to start again and forget anything you weren't proud of in your past. If you got labeled as someone who couldn't keep a secret or if you made some enemies along your way, now's your chance to change all that!

Saying Goodbye to Friends

Saying goodbye to friends is one of the hardest things about moving. There's never an easy way to tell them that you're leaving, but making your goodbyes special will make it easier to remember them when you're settled into your new home.

Make a list of all the people you want to say goodbye to. Think about school friends, neighbors, or other people you feel close to. Decide how you want to say goodbye to each of them. A phone call? A gift? A letter? A visit?

Plan something special. Do you want to ask your parents to have a goodbye party at your house? Do you want to plan a special outing with your friends? Do you want to meet everyone at your favorite spot? No matter what you decide, plan something special, so you can all get together, take pictures, and share more laughs.

Visit your favorite places. You and your friends probably have a favorite hangout spot, maybe a movie theater, a park, or someone's house. Try to visit these places together one last time. Take some pictures so you'll never forget them.

Make a scrapbook together. Have some close friends over and ask them to bring photos and

When house hunting, don't forget to check on school enrollment zones. Check with the local school district or your School Liaison Officer for details other small things that remind them of your special friendship. Then get crafty! Have each of your friends make a "memory page" for your book, or just create each page together.

Get your friends involved. Get your friends to give you advice on your new room: How should you decorate it? Ask them to help you get organized before you pack:

What should you keep or give away? Ask them for advice on making new friends: What do they love about you?

SPECIAL NEEDS INBOUND STUDENTS

Special Needs Identification and Assignment Coordination: SNIAC

Special Needs Identification and Assignment Coordination is the process that documents and evaluates the medical and educational needs of family members in order to advise families and AF Personnel on the appropriateness of family member travel.

In the Air Force, all families with a special needs family member must participate in the SNIAC review process before any government-funded Permanent Change of Station (PCS) travel is authorized. This applies to relocations within the continental U.S. (CONUS) or outside the continental U.S. (OCONUS).

Special Needs Coordinator (SNC's) are located at the SNIAC office in the Medical Treatment Facility (MTF). SNC's work with the EFMP-FS and the Assignments branch at AFPC to coordinate medical, education, community support, housing and personnel services to families with special needs.

EFMP-Family Support– FS (EFMP-FS)

At the Airman & Family Readiness Center (A&FRC), an EFMP Specialist is available to ensure that each family receives comprehensive coordinated EFMP-FS support through the military and/or civilian community. The EFMP-FS Specialist can discuss the needs of the EFM and recommend appropriate local, state and national resources related to relocation, support groups, community enhancement programs and respite care, military child education and recreation.

Exceptional Family Member Program (EFMP)

- Enrollment is Mandatory for all active duty service members that have family members diagnosed with a physical, intellectual, or emotional condition
- By combining the efforts of the personnel and medical staff, as well as the education system, the EFMP helps ensure continuity in care and education for family members as they move from one duty station to the next

SPECIAL NEEDS OUTBOUND STUDENTS

Transitioning a Special Needs Student Checklist

Moving is a part of every military members career. For all families there is an enormous amount of work involved with the transition, but for families with a special needs child, there are even more things to consider, remember and arrange. Being informed about where you are going and who is there to help is key.

Planning ahead, starting the process before you start the journey and asking the right questions can create a smoother transition and enable the process to move along more quickly once you arrive at your new home. The School Liaison is here to assist you with this process whether you are new to the base, or preparing to leave for another duty station. (stompproject.org)

Before you leave:

- Appropriate assignment? Be sure the duty station you have been assigned is equipped to deal with your child's special needs. Do your own checking to see what is and isn't available there.
- Contact the Receiving School Liaison: Let them know you will be arriving and what your needs may be. The School Liaison may be able to provide you with some contacts and information to help you in your transition.
- Laws and Regulations: Are the schools run by local schools districts or DODEA? Find out and start learning about the laws and regulations that apply at your new location, before you leave.
- Contacts: Collect all numbers you will need on arrival at your new duty station. Unfortunately, you have to be present at the new location in order to apply for many things. The School Liaison can assist you with collecting this information. You should have the following information ready to start calling and visiting on arrival:
 - Local SSI/Medicaid office: Eligibility varies from state to state, it does not carry over from state to state. You must reapply in your new state.
 - Local Dept of Developmental Disabilities/Dept of Mental Health office: States have different things to offer, so it may be worth looking into.
 - Local School Districts
 - Local Support Groups: Contacting these groups can provide a great deal of information. Speaking with parents about local schools/housing/doctors is ultimately the best resource available to you.
